Soil & Water Stewardship Week 2006 lest we forget ...

April 30 - May 7 is Soil & Water Stewardship Week in Oklahoma. The Oklahoma Conservation Commission asks everyone to remember the work done by our farmers, ranchers and other landowners to protect our natural resources. Never forget how far we have come. Support locally-led, voluntary natural resource conservation.

Conservation Commission Encourages Everyone to be "Water Wise"

Soil & Water Stewardship Week

Governor Brad Henry has proclaimed April 30 – May 7, 2006, as Soil and Water Stewardship Week in Oklahoma. (See related story on page two.)

For over 60 years a national network of conservation districts has helped Americans learn to conserve natural resources. This year America's conservation districts commemorate Soil and Water Stewardship Week with the theme "Water Wise."

Conservation practices in the United States have helped us achieve an historic standard of living and helped protect us from the recurrence of disasters like the Dust Bowl. We enjoy a wide variety of fresh, healthy food. Drinking water supplies are clean and mainly free from disease. Lakes, rivers, and streams are much cleaner than 30 years ago. Air quality has greatly improved in the last 50 years. Conservation practices that helped rescue America from the Dust Bowl continue to protect Oklahoma today. That fact is especially evident during the extended hotter-than-normal, dry, windy weather the plains have experienced this year.

Stewardship Week is one of the largest national annual programs to promote conservation. The National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD, www.nacdnet.org) oversees the national program. Since 1955 NACD and the Oklahoma Association of Conservation Districts (OACD) have sponsored the Stewardship Week program. This year the Oklahoma Farm Bureau and Monsanto Company have partnered with OACD to sponsor some activities including production of public service announcements.

During the week local conservation districts will work with media outlets, communities, faith-based groups and local schools to promote the concept of Stewardship. This concept involves personal and social responsibility, including a duty to learn about and improve natural resources as we use them wisely, leaving a rich legacy for future generations.

Governor's Proclamation: Soil & Water Stewardship Week in Oklahoma

Whereas, human beings are dependent on fertile soil and clean water to provide our food and fiber; and
Whereas, we are ethically bound to care for the natural resources that sustain our life; and
Whereas effective conservation practices have helped provide us a richer standard of living and protect us from the recurrence of disasters such as the Dust Bowl; and
Whereas our health and happiness, and safety and security depend on healthy soil and clean water; and
Whereas soil and water stewardship calls for each person to appreciate and conserve these precious resources;
Now, therefore, I, Brad Henry, Governor of the State of Oklahoma, do hereby proclaim April 30 through May 7, 2006, as Soil & Water Stewardship Week in the State of Oklahoma.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Oklahoma to be affixed.
Done at the Capitol, in the City of Oklahoma City, the 12th day of April, in the Year of Our Lord two thousand and six, and of the State of Oklahoma in the ninety-eighth year.

Commissioner Reports

Commissioners made favorable comments regarding the recent OACD State Meeting. Commissioner Dan Lowrance thanked OCC staff for their work with the meeting. Commissioner Rick Jeans stated that a group would go to Washington, D.C., that week for a meeting with NRCS Chief Bruce Knight regarding the NRCS state budget.

Staff Reports

Administration: Mike Thralls, OCC executive director, stated that he would be among those attending the NRCS budget meeting in Washington, D.C. Thralls reported construction in the Stamper Project would begin in the next 30 days. The site has been relocated from the Illinois River Watershed to within the Spavinaw Creek Watershed.

Ben Pollard, OCC assistant director, reported on upcoming events at the Capitol including GIS Day, Conservation Day, Agriculture Day and Water Appreciation Day. OCC, OACD and NRCS will be represented with booths at these events. At Conservation Day, an awards ceremony will be held in the Blue Room, and the Governor will present awards to Cooperator of the Year Holton Payne, District Director of the Year Joy Elledge and District of the Year Garfield County Conservation District. Five educators would also be recognized. Pollard stated that, as well as the National Land and Range Judging Contest, the Public Employee Recognition Week is scheduled for the first week in May. OCC staff will have a full staff meeting that week and the OCC Awards and Recognition Committee will recognize staff members. He stated that Soil Stewardship Week is also that week and that the OACD is planning promotional activities.

District Services: Lisa Knauf, DS director, reported a Women In Agriculture session during the recent OACD State meeting was well attended. Knauf reported on assisting the Ellis County CD this month. She thanked OCC staff Chris Dunlevy and Mark Harrison for making the district directory available electronically to district offices.

Water Quality: Dan Butler, WQ director, reported that OCC received commitments for Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP) projects from the City of Tulsa for $1.25 million in the Spavinaw Creek watershed and from the Scenic Rivers Commission for $191,000 in the Illinois River watershed. Staff met with the Cherokee Nation to discuss monitoring and lab assistance. Butler reported that the Fort Cobb Priority Watershed Project is scheduled to end in nine months, but there is a substantial amount of money left in the grant for sprigging assistance because it has been too dry to sprig in the area over the past three years. Staff is requesting that EPA extend the grant.

Abandoned Mine Land: Mike Kastl, AML director, reported that OCC is waiting on a work order from the Department of Central Services for the Kirk-150 project. The Charles Phase 2-258 project is running beyond contract time and the contractor is being assessed $300 per day until all work is completed. He reported that a certified land surveyor is being used to establish property boundaries on the McPheeters-258 project.

Financial Management/Human Resources: Steve Coffman, FM/HR director, reported staff is preparing for an audit of OCC's financial records for FY2005 and the first six months of FY2006 by the State Auditor and Inspector's office. Coffman attended a House committee meeting to discuss district directors' eligibility to participate in the state's health insurance program. Committee members commended OCC and districts for their work. Coffman will attend CORE training to be able to access to databases and to write queries and reports.

Information Technology: Mike Sharp, IT director, stated that a work order was issued on the West Commerce Tar Creek AML Project. He reported that work continues on the Southeast Commerce Tar Creek AML project. He met with GMR & Associates concerning the Howerton Tar Creek AML project design. Sharp stated that staff has been preparing for the 12th Annual GIS Day at the Capitol on March 15.

Conservation Programs: Robert Toole, CP director, noted that even with a collaborative initiative going on with the Corporation Commission, watershed structures continue to be impacted by oil and gas drilling activity. With the anticipated increase in drilling activity, the rate of incidents will increase. OCC will continue to strive to improve collaboration with the Corporation Commission and provide tools, training and support to conservation districts.

USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service

Darrel Dominick, NRCS state conservationist, stated he would travel to Washington, D.C., to discuss budget issues. He reported there is a rapid decrease in NRCS technical assistance funding to states. During FY05, NRCS in Oklahoma received a $4 million reduction in technical assistance, which established a baseline. In FY06 another $2 million was removed from technical assistance. The Environmental Quality Incentive Program financial assistance is up three percent but technical assistance dollars went down nine percent on top of last year's cuts. He stated that because of the reductions office closures will be considered. He also stated that employees in the watershed planning design and construction offices may be moved to other program areas. Dominick stated the reclamation work being done in the Tar Creek area is the most positive work done there in the last 30 years.

USDA Farm Service Agency

Amanda Tye, Cleveland County FSA executive director, reported on policy changes to the Direct and Counter-cyclical Program. She stated that 470,701 acres have been burnt in recent wildfires. The Emergency Conservation Program is available to assist with fence repairs in 27 counties. She reported that 47 counties have been approved under ECP for livestock water assistance and six counties are pending approval. Tye stated that all counties have been declared disaster areas due to drought and that all producers are eligible for emergency loan assistance. The Conservation Reserve Program sign-up begins March 27 through April 17.

Oklahoma Association of Conservation Districts

Clay Pope, OACD executive director, stated that a controlled burn bill passed out of the state House Agriculture Committee earlier that morning. He stated he would attend the meeting in Washington, D.C., with NRCS Chief Bruce Knight, to discuss the NRCS budget. Pope expressed his appreciation to OCC staff for their assistance with the OACD State Meeting. Pope stated that Monsanto and the Oklahoma Farm Bureau agreed to help sponsor Soil Stewardship Week activities this year. He reported meeting with the Cherokee Nation regarding CREP projects.

Next Meeting

Commissioners approved a motion to hold the April Commission meeting in Garfield County CD, recently named the District of the Year, beginning at 10:00 a.m. at a location to be announced.
